A Fighting Cry for '56

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 17.

The great crowd of almost 4,000 which attended the Saturday night dinner in honor of House Speaker Sam Rayburn spilled out of the huge and cavernous National Guard Armory into a great confusion of taxicabs and personal cars.

Three ladies appeared by my side at the curb and stood there, afraid of the great confusion of traffic. One of them was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. I asked the privilege of escorting them through the crush of automobiles and people hurrying through the bedlam.

I pulled open the door of a convertible and behind the wheel was Dean Acheson, former secretary of state. I helped the three ladies into the back seat and said, "Well, Mr. Secretary, every day as poor Mr. Dulles retreats and reverses himself you look better and better."

"Doesn't he, though," said Mrs. Wilson.

I guess this little incident sums up as well as anything else the spirit and feel of the Rayburn dinner.

The Democratic Party is the oldest political institution in the world. It was old when the Republican Party was born. It always has been a brawling, heterogeneous party.

Full of Vigor

As Sam Rayburn said, the party has often been in error but it has never lost sight of the fact it is a party of all the people. That is why it has endured. It also explains why, with the Republicans in office, it is the party of vigor and enthusiasm and the one which supplies the leadership for a President lost and deserted by the politicians of his own organization.

It was a vast and expansive evening. There was one great moment when Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt stood with Mrs. Harry Truman for a picture. The great crowd stood and made the huge cavern of the armory echo with its cheers.

The speeches were short and to the point. Sam Rayburn's was, of course, the longest. He is a kindly man and so he spoke of the great loneliness of President Eisenhower, a good man deserted and used by the Knowlands and the McCarthy isolationists.

Best Line

The great Texan paused a moment as if in reflection and then gave to the evening one of its best lines.

"We may have a few amiable idiots in the Democratic Party," he said, "but we do not have any old fogies, and we assuredly do not have any young fogies who are even worse than old fogies."

A Great Ovation Greeted Harry Truman

As usual he came out fighting. It will irritate much of the American press because what he said was true. He said it was deeply regrettable that much of the nation's press was covering up the failures and errors of the administration. He insisted the confused, contradictory foreign policy of the Eisenhower administration was bringing the country closer and closer to an unnecessary war. It is not generally known that it was Harry Truman who ordered the 7th Fleet to Formosa to protect the island and the refugee Chiang Kai-shek.

"When the administration announced to the world it was unleashing Chiang Kai-shek and that it planned massive retaliation, it then convinced the peoples of Asia that it was bent on war," he said. "It disturbed our Allies and friends. It made us vulnerable to the Communist claims that we are intent on conquest."

Harry Truman plainly was outraged.

"This policy of unleashing Chiang Kai-shek and the threat of massive retaliation, from which the administration now has retreated, was not merely a serious blunder," he said. "It was a bald-faced political fraud."

The Democrats honored Sam Rayburn of Texas.

But they also made it plain they intend to win in 1956.

Rail Strike Truce Bid Hits Snag

Phone Line Cuts Renew; 575 Out

A Federal Mediation Service proposal to arbitrate issues in dispute appeared doomed Monday as the railroad strike entered its sixth week.

Meanwhile, more than 575 Atlanta telephones have been knocked out as violence flared anew in the 35-day-old telephone strike.

Non-operating rail union spokesmen termed conditions proposed by Louisville and Nashville Railroad officials "unacceptable."

STALEMATE

The conflicting positions indicated no immediate end to the strike, which has brought freight and passenger service to a virtual standstill.

The Mediation Service of the National Labor Relations Board, saying it could do no more, proposed that labor and management submit all undecided issues to a neutral person for a decision.

Personnel Director G. C. Howard of L. & N. said the company is ready to agree to binding arbitration "if the strike will end upon the signature of the arbitration agreement and the selection of the arbitrator."

Howard said the scope of the arbitration should be "within the recommendations of the President's emergency board" which first heard the dispute.

BALKS AT LIMIT

G. E. Leighty, union chairman, told the mediation board the unions "accept fully" the board's proposal.

However, he termed unacceptable the company plan to limit the arbitration to findings of the President's emergency board.

In the Southwest telephone strike, company officials said 10 new instances of cable damage reported in Atlanta Sunday ran to 169 the total since the Communications Workers of America (CIO) walked out March 14. Major damage was reported at Murphy avenue and Victory drive, SW, where 135 phones were put out of service, and Melrose drive and Katherine street, SW, where 110 phones were knocked out.

In another development, telephone company officials said that four more striking telephone workers have been discharged for "misconduct."

A Saturday night disturbance in front of the telephone building on Ivy street resulted in the arrest of one person. About 300 persons gathered outside the building, but were kept under control by police.

85 Lost, 33 Hurt As Floods, Slide Strike in Japan

SAESBO, Japan, Monday, April 18 (AP)—Floods and a landslide left at least 85 Japanese dead or missing today and 33 injured in southwestern Japan.

Most casualties came in a landslide near here, Earth loosened by rain engulfed part of a mining village Saturday and buried 67, nearly half of them children, police reported.

The landslide still moved toward Saesbo today. It is a mass of waste and earth built up over the years by the Abe Coal Mining Co.

It let go while most miners were eating dinner. The landslide buried 10 large dormitory-type apartments owned by the mining company.

Wailing Sirens Mean 'Take Cover . . . Attack'

This is the second article in a series on whether Atlanta is ready for an H-bomb alert. The Constitution surveyed the metropolitan area's emergency resources and the series is based on the results of that survey.

By ANNE GOWEN

A new system of siren signals has been adopted to warn Atlantans that enemy bombers are nearing the city.

An undulating, wailing siren or short blasts from whistles will mean: "Take cover. Attack appears immediate."

A steady, shrill tone lasting five minutes will mean: "Atlantans, turn on your radios (640 and 1240 on the dial) for further instructions."

The new system was devised by federal Civil Defense officials and submitted to towns and cities.

Surpluses Wasting Billions, U.S. Told

WASHINGTON, April 17—The Hoover Commission told Congress today the government is wasting billions of dollars by piling up "mountainous" supplies of unneeded goods and then selling them as surplus at a fraction of cost.

Furthermore, it said some of these surplus goods unloaded by military services abroad are finding their way into Communist hands.

POOL "ENORMOUS"
The 12-man bipartisan commission, headed by former President Herbert Hoover, said government supplies have now reached an "enormous pool" valued at 155 billion dollars and are scattered throughout the world.

The report estimated they will be disposed of at the rate of more than two billion dollars annually during the next few years. It urged "modern techniques of selling under the advice of merchandising experts" to recover much more than the 5 to 7 per cent of cost which present methods bring in.

But the biggest problem, the Commission said, is to prevent the piling up of excessive surpluses in the first place.

The report said reduced buying, more efficient use of stocks on hand and more intelligent disposal methods "would go a long way toward eliminating the annual deficit in the national budget."

A task force headed by Gen. Robert E. Wood, former chairman of Sears Roebuck, found at Raritan, N.J., that on 10 items the Army had an average 32.6 years supply on hand.

128-YEAR SUPPLY

At Mechanicsburg, Pa., the Navy had enough gear drives to supply needs for 128 years at the current rate of issue.

Inventory records were found woefully deficient. A check on 25 Air Force items at Warner Robbins, Ga., showed actual stocks equaled listed inventory amounts on only six items. Eight items were found to exceed inventory records by amounts ranging from 1 to 367 per cent. On the other hand stocks of 11 items were short of inventory records by amounts ranging from 2 to 100 per cent, or "no stocks at all."

Further, at Warner Robbins, on seven items alone, stocks on hand exceeded authorized levels by $1,243,492.

The commission said one agency often pays commercial prices for an item which another agency is selling as surplus at a severe loss.

It criticized "primitive" methods of selling surplus. It said the government offers many sound or unused articles on an "as is, where is—buy at your own risk" basis which takes on the aspect of a distress sale and brings prices that are far too low.

Statewide Salk Shots Start Today

Supplies of antipolio vaccine will be in every county in Georgia Monday morning when the mass inoculation of first and second grade pupils will get under way in the state.

That was the report Sunday of Dr. T. F. Sellers, director of the State Health Department, who estimated 211,000 Georgia children will receive the free vaccine.

Dr. Sellers predicted that 95 to 100 per cent of the eligible children would be vaccinated. He said parents of only about 80 per cent approved the vaccine before the official announcement of its success—but "many more" parents have requested the vaccine for their children in the past week.

DISTRIBUTION

W. H. Ferry, district representative of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said he and state health personnel repackaged the vaccine Sunday for the state's 159 counties. Some counties sent special representatives to pick up the vaccine here—and other counties were sent their supplies by train, bus or car.

Dr. Roy McGee, Fulton County health director, said about 23,000 first and second graders in Fulton County are slated to be vaccinated at more than 100 clinics.

Dr. Sellers, Dr. McGee and Ferry discussed the Salk antipolio vaccine on "Press Gallery" over WSB-TV, sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution. They were interviewed by George Boswell, Constitution editorial assistant, and Katherine Barnwell, medical news reporter.

ENOUGH FOR 1ST SHOT

Dr. Sellers said enough vaccine arrived here Saturday for the initial shots in the Georgia program. It will be in charge of each clinic in Fulton County. He said the doctor may be consulted if there is any question whether a child should be vaccinated.

If the child is absent from school when the first shot is given, he may be vaccinated at a "make-up clinic," Dr. McGee said.

State Expects 200,000 New Tax Customers

Georgia Revenue Commissioner T. V. Williams is expecting a "heavy mail" Monday in the form of state income tax returns dispatched before the Sunday midnight deadline.

Williams, who extended the deadline from Friday to give "every Georgian an opportunity to file," said he still hopes to get 200,000 more returns this year than last year.

He said the tax office was jammed with taxpayers Saturday.

The Constitution scored "firsts" in non-spot news, sports and feature-writing categories in class AA.

Celestine Sibley won top honors for non-spot news for a series on homes for delinquent girls.

Jack Nelson won first place in the feature-writing category for his series on child molesters.

Furman Bishop, sports editor, took the top sports award for his column about a football game against the background of a woman having a heart attack.

The Columbus Enquirer staff took first place in the spot news judging in class AA for articles on the Phenix City slaying of A. L. Patterson and the same series of articles was judged best-in-show and took the sweepstakes award.

An Atlanta Journal photographer, Ken Patterson, won the photography sweepstakes for a picture showing a young criminal in the hands of a policeman.

Atlanta Journal Photographer Bill Wilson won first place in sports photography for "You Can't Win 'em All," a study of a fearful high school football player.

Briefs Chief On Formosa At Augusta

By W. H. LAWRENCE

New York Times News Service Special to The Atlanta Constitution

AUGUSTA, April 17—Secretary of State Dulles today reported to President Eisenhower a greatly intensified buildup of offensive air power by the Chinese Reds opposite Formosa.

The secretary of state said the newly discovered Communist activities increased materially their capabilities—if not their intentions—of imminent attack.

The President reacted, according to a statement by Dulles, by directing an appeal to the leaders of the Afro-Asian Conference assembling at Bandung, Indonesia, to "seek a renunciation of force to achieve national ambitions."

LOOKS TO BANDUNG

Declaring that peace "is now in grave jeopardy," the Dulles statement continued, Eisenhower said the leaders at Bandung have "an opportunity, at a critical hour, to voice the peaceful aspirations of the peoples of the world and thus exert a practical influence for peace."

"Such an influence, if it prevailed, would open a new era of social and economic advancement for the Asian-African peoples and provide them an opportunity to build solid and sustaining foundations for responsible self-government and durable national independence," Eisenhower asserted.

Dulles flew here from Washington for a two-hour luncheon meeting with the President alone in his cottage on the grounds of the Augusta National Golf Club. He talked with reporters briefly after the meeting with Eisenhower, then flew back to Washington.

CAUTIOUS ON TREATY

While Dulles spoke of the "grave implications" of the Chinese buildup in the Far East, he adopted a cautiously optimistic view of the Soviet agreement with Austria to conclude a state treaty.

The secretary of state told newsmen this action seemed to improve the chances for a Big Four meeting either "at the summit" or at the foreign ministers level. He warned against over-optimism until all the facts are

3 Held Here in Kidnap, Assault On Woman, FBI Hunting Fourth

Three men sought in a savage attack and rape of a 53-year-old Chattanooga woman were arrested in Atlanta Sunday by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

A fourth man, reportedly armed and dangerous, is being sought. He is believed to be in the Atlanta area.

John K. Mumford, special agent in charge of the Atlanta FBI office, listed the captured men as Edward Rufus Bice, 33, of Chattanooga, a bus driver and cook; Paul Leroy Allen, 24, an amputee and paralytic, also of Chattanooga; George Krull, 33, of McKees Rocks, Pa., a mechanic and house painter.

Krull's brother, Michael Krull, 31, alias Mike Krull, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is being sought, Mumford said. The arrested trio are being held

Vinson Backs Battle Call Of Reserves by President

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee today threw his support to a move to let President Eisenhower call military reserves into battle without seeking consent of Congress.

Vinson also predicted his committee will approve tomorrow a watered-down version of the President's compulsory military reserve program. Vinson said the bill would give Eisenhower most of what he wants, but he insisted it does not have "a line of UMT in it."

Before the final vote, the committee will act on the proposal to give the President authority to call up to 750,000 ready reserves without prior congressional action. Under present law, Congress first must decide how many reserves are to be called. The committee also must act on a plan under which the Defense Department could draft youths for a new six months training program if there were not enough volunteers to fill the yearly quota of between 100,000 and 250,000 men.

Vinson told a reporter he would vote to give the President authority to call up the reserves automatically. But he said he would oppose drafting men for six months in the reserve training program.

Supporters of the over-all bill feel elimination of the draft provision would meet any argument that the program is a step toward compulsory military training. Congress repeatedly has refused to approve UMT. The bill would require every

Deny Blame For Crash, British Say

Safe in Hong Kong, Chinese Are Told

By THOMAS P. RONAN
New York Times News Service
Special to The Atlanta Constitution
LONDON, April 17—The British government has told the Chinese Communist government it does not accept any responsibility for the crash of an Air India Constellation in the South China sea last week.

The plane, bound from Hong Kong to Jakarta, Indonesia, was carrying a crew of seven and 11 Chinese Communist officials and journalists to the Asian-African conference in Bandung, Indonesia. Only three members of the crew survived.

Shortly after the crash the Chinese Communist foreign ministry charged that United States and Chinese Nationalist agents had sabotaged the plane. Asserting it had warned British authorities of the plot, it said the British government and Hong Kong officials bore serious responsibilities for the crash.

FAILED ELSEWHERE
In its note to Peiping, Britain said the authorities had taken all precautions to insure the safety of the passengers and the aircraft while it was in Hong Kong. It said it could not, therefore, "accept any suggestion by the Chinese government that the British authorities in Hong Kong or elsewhere failed in their duties."

"Pending a full investigation, it is premature to assign any cause for the crash," the note said. While deploring the incident and the loss of life, the note said it was not for the British to conduct a formal investigation, since the plane belonged to an Indian airline and the crash did not occur in British territory or territorial waters.

TOLD US NOTHING
Britain denied the Chinese foreign ministry had informed Humphrey Travelyan, the British charge d'affaires in Peiping, of arrangements to sabotage the plane to assassinate members of the Chinese delegation.

Instead, the Communists had told the British on April 10 that Peiping had informed the Chinese Nationalists might make trouble for a party of Chinese journalists when they left Hong Kong the next day for Bandung, Britain said.

There was no suggestion of sabotage, the note continued.

Reds Simmer as Dixieland Beat Rocks Old Heidelberg Castle

BERLIN, April 17 (AP)—Now it's the Dixieland beat in old Heidelberg.

That's the complaint today of the East Berlin newspaper Berliner Zeitung. An article in the Communist paper described American influence in the famous old university town, which the U. S. Army has made its European headquarters.

"At the gate of the Heidelberg castle one's eyes are assaulted by a sign," said the paper. "It announces that the 'Spree City Stompers' will give a concert next Sunday in the King's hall of the castle."

The paper explained that Dixieland concerts are a regular feature of the castle.

Jailbirds Agree To Quit Chirping If Sheriff Will Restore Feedbag

KIAMATH FALLS, Ore., April 17 (AP)—The county jail's dusk-to-dawn girl quintet staged its fifth consecutive hillbilly concert last night, to the dismay of sleepless jailers, but it might have been the final performance.

The concert ended at 5 a.m. today after truce talks between the five women prisoners, all serving terms for minor offenses, and Sheriff Murray Britton. He said the girls agreed to quit singing if regular meals are served them.

They have been on bread and water since Tuesday and all mattresses and bedding have been removed from their cells.

Britton said if the girls are quiet tonight they may be served one full meal tomorrow.

Two men arrested yesterday as suspected smugglers of song books to the songbird jailbirds each was fined $100 on vagrancy charges.

They asked to serve out their fines at the rate of $2 a day as prescribed by law.

'Baby' Chides Daddy; Truman Still Adamant

By WILLIAM S. WHITE
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, April 17—The telephone rang about 10:30 this morning in a suite at the Mayflower Hotel and the elderly occupant carried on a short, fond conversation. He chuckled, and then called to his wife:

"Bess, Baby wants to talk to you, from New York."

Former President Truman then turned to his guest and said: "Margaret has just been giving me a fit; she said she supposed I was happy now that I had had a chance to blow up."

Truman had delivered one of his old-fashioned "give 'em hell" speeches last night at a testimonial dinner for Sam Rayburn of Texas, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Neither his daughter's affectionate chiding nor a night's reflection had caused the former president to soften his views toward the Eisenhower administration. He declared himself unwilling to discuss the details of the Eisenhower administration's present policy on Formosa.

"I haven't any Joint Chiefs of Staff any more, he explained, "and I haven't got a great deal of information on the subject." He therefore declined to say whether he thought the present Democratic Congress had been right or wrong in backing President Eisenhower in any military action he might think necessary in connection with Formosa.

Truman was quite clear and firm on one point, however. This was his feeling that the Senate had not adequately debated the subject. Had there been such a debate, the former President observed, he would have felt no anxiety at the ultimate decision.

Indeed, he disclosed that he had one, and only one, remaining political purpose.

"This, he said, was to defend the Democratic party and most of all "to keep it over on the liberal side."

He made it plain that in accusing the Eisenhower administration last night of the most "cynical political behavior" since the Harding era he had meant some of his fire to fall also on certain Democrats.

"I have got tired a long time ago," he said, "of some mealy-mouthed senators who kiss like on both cheeks."

Truman did not name these senators. The implication seemed inescapable, however, that he was far from satisfied with the restrained partisan activity of the present Democratic leadership of the Senate headed by Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas.

PRECINCT BOSS

The former President recalled that he would be 71 years old on May 8 and said with emphasis

Hall Fires Blast at Truman, Adlai, Calls Them 'New Deal Peashooters'

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—GOP national chairman Leonard W. Hall today denounced former President Truman and Adlai E. Stevenson as "New Deal peashooters" who are trying to "tear down" President Eisenhower for political advantage.

Chairman Styles Bridges (R-N.H.) of the Senate GOP policy committee also charged that Truman and Stevenson were only looking for "political profit" in next year's presidential race when they attacked Eisenhower and his administration at a Saturday night dinner here.

LEAVES NO DOUBT

While Hall did not mention Truman by name, he left no doubt as to his targets when he declared that the President's popularity "continues to grow higher and higher and the New Deal peashooters will get nowhere."

Truman told a testimonial dinner for speaker Sam Rayburn that the Eisenhower administration has been playing "political tricks" with foreign policy, domestic welfare and the nation's security. He accused the Republicans of "bare-faced political fraud."

Stevenson told the dinner the Democratic party must stand for three basic things—social progress, civil freedom and peace.

Stevenson and Rayburn also lashed at the Republicans. But Rayburn urged both Democrats and Republicans to use restraint in dealing with national security matters.

Hall said in a statement that "New Deal Democrat efforts to tear down President Eisenhower would fail because the people have learned, above all, he is a man we can trust."

BLASTS PROMISES

The GOP chairman asserted Stevenson sounded like he was "about to hand in his resignation from the Democratic party" when he said that "he is now for civil rights, social progress and peace."

"The Democratic party has never kept its promises on civil rights and the three major wars of our generation occurred during Democratic administrations," he said. "Social progress was never greater than under Eisenhower."

Bridges said in a statement that while Truman was delivering a "vitriolic, partisan and unfounded attack" on Eisenhower's foreign policy, Rayburn was praising "Democratic restraint and cooperation with the Republican administration."

"In the light of these contradictions, it is not unreasonable to ask: who really generates the political bickering," Bridges said. "new spirit of genuine bipartisan cooperation" in "sharp contrast to the phony kind" he said Truman practiced while in office.

The Atlanta Constitution, for the third consecutive year, will award an expense-paid tour of Georgia cattle farms to the boy or girl showing the grand champion steer at the Atlanta Fat Cattle Show here Tuesday.

The winning 4-H Club member or Future Farmer will be allowed to invite his or her county agent, vocational agriculture teacher or some other person to make the trip also.

WEEK-LONG TOUR

The tour will last a week during which time The Constitution's guests will visit purebred and commercial cattle farms throughout the state inspecting not only cattle but pastures and modern farming practices as well.

During the trip, which will be under the supervision of Constitution Farm Editor Jack Gilchrist, the paper's guests will travel between 1,000 and 1,500 miles.

PREVIOUS WINNERS

Last year the award was won by Annie Garrett of Monroe who was accompanied on the trip by her county agent, Henry Shores. The previous year the trip was won by David Vaughan of Fairmount; his county agent, John Gunnels, made the trip with him.

Nearly 300 cattle from many sections of Georgia are expected to pour into Atlanta today for the state's largest fat steer show. The animals will be shown Tuesday morning and the young exhibitors will be entertained by Atlanta businessmen at the annual cattle show banquet Tuesday night.

Sale of the fat cattle will be Wednesday.

Dreams of Art Museum Take Form

Atlanta's leading art patrons Sunday put down the cornerstone for a $750,000 dream.

It was the new art museum at 1262 Peachtree St., NE. Building is scheduled for completion in August.

For four of the patrons, the cornerstone represented the beginning of the end of a dream which goes back to 1905. They were the original four members who chartered the Atlanta Art Assn. in that year—Mrs. Haralson Bleckley, Mrs. Thornton Marye, Mrs. Roby Robinson and Henry A. Alexander.

Msgr. Joseph Cassidy spoke the invocation and Rabbi David Marx gave the benediction. Walter C. Hill, chairman of the board of trustees of the association; Robert F. Maddox, Ivan Allen Sr. and Herbert D. Oliver, all past presidents, also took part in the ceremony.

At the same time, the art association sponsored a showing of 24 paintings by English painter Theodore Hancock, two of which were paintings of Atlanta. The art exhibit at the present museum attracted some 400 visitors.

Hancock's paintings will be on view in the High Museum through April 24. His modernistic paintings of landscapes and city scenes have won wide acclaim.

Buy Stone Mt., Develop Park, Jaycees Ask

The Georgia Junior Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution urging the State of Georgia to "purchase Stone Mountain immediately and to develop proper park, lake and picnic facilities."

The resolution by Georgia Jaycees also urged the State to complete the memorial on Stone Mountain to the Confederate States of America.

Copies of the resolution were sent to the governor, lieutenant-governor, speaker of the House and chairman of the Stone Mountain Park Authority.

Georgia Jaycees pointed out Stone Mountain already is visited by many thousands of tourists a year in its present state—and they insisted "this number could be greatly multiplied."

Arthur Withers, state chairman of the Stone Mountain project for the Georgia Junior Chamber of Commerce, said every section of Georgia would benefit from development of Stone Mountain.

Civil Defense Has Atlanta 'Confused'

Civil Defense Director Val Peterson, urging that the American people become aware of their danger of atomic incineration, said recently: "The American people have simply not accepted the possibility of an enemy attack."

That appears to be quite true. It is certainly true in Atlanta as far as the average person can determine, although there are a number of loyal devoted volunteers working to set up a program. At present the public is genuinely confused.

Local Civil Defense Director Elliott Jackson has been complaining frequently lately about the lack of cooperation from city officials in the matter of finances and from the Police Department. He complained that no member of the department even bothered to attend meetings.

Last week Mr. Jackson charged that the Civil Defense program has been in operation for five years but that to his knowledge there has been no emergency police programs planned for the area. He asked the question: "Is the Police Department in Civil Defense or not?"

Chief Jenkins in turn called Jackson's program one of "confusion" and recommended indefinite postponement of the "hypothetical question." For a program that already has been postponed for five years, one wonders what the word "indefinite" means.

Chief Jenkins complained of lack of personnel to assist in the program. But meanwhile, Atlanta has been called on to participate in a nationwide school evacuation exercise on May 18 and a nationwide city evacuation practice on June 15.

Mr. Jackson has been Civil Defense director for several years. He says that bringing the apathy of officials to public attention was a last resort. Surely if this apathy had been due to Mr. Jackson himself something could have been done before this. If there is a need for a Civil Defense program, personality clashes should not stand in the way.

That leaves the basic question unanswered: Does Atlanta need a good Civil Defense program and does it need to train people to carry it out? It has neither today. The inadequate funds now appropriated had best be spent somewhere else for all the good that is being accomplished. If we need no Civil Defense program, let's abandon the pretense.

Meanwhile, should we have an atomic or hydrogen bomb war now, most Atlantans would, indeed, be incinerated. Then, of course, there'd no longer be a need for concern on the part of anybody.

Hit Where It Hurts, Labor Supports Farmer

It's a funny thing how economic necessity can change one's mind. For instance, take the stand of organized labor in support of the farmers on price supports.

The AFL and the CIO have both joined farm groups in supporting the move to restore rigid price supports on five basic commodities.

Are they taking this stand because they want to pay higher prices for food, clothing and other farm commodities? Only the stupid will say so.

The basic answer lies in the fact that the steady decline in farm income is affecting workers' jobs, especially those dependent on farm buying power. Employment in industries catering to farm needs has been declining in almost exact proportion to the decline in farm income.

Then, too, organized labor wants support for its bid to hike minimum wages.

Based on 1947-49 income averages, the farmer has declined from a base figure of around 100 to about 75 while the average personal income for other groups is now pushing 150. This decline in farm purchasing power is affecting the entire economy. If it should continue, dangerous dislocations will result.

Labor, hit where it hurts, is lending a sympathetic ear. Hunger is a strong persuader.

Georgia Institutions All Have Growing Pains

Gracewood, Georgia's home for mentally defective children, will dedicate a new dormitory on May 1. The dormitory will accommodate 100 persons. Next on the list of improvements at Gracewood is a new classroom building.

The home, which is under the supervision of the State Welfare Department, has been greatly improved in recent years. New buildings have been added, and the problem of staffing the place has been solved with the co-operation of the University System's Medical College in Augusta.

But like other Georgia institutions, all the work that has been done isn't enough. The state is growing faster than its services can be expanded, and the transition period is a painful one. Gracewood has more than 800 patients, and, despite the improvements in its physical plant, still has a waiting list of approximately 300.

Gracewood's University System, the Milledgeville Hospital and the state prison at Reidsville, all are having to make do with whatever is available, and that which is available just isn't sufficient. All over the state, in cities, towns and counties, public services have been outgrown. And, inevitably, there is a time lag before supply catches up with demand again.

Cancer Will Be Cured Through More Research

Last year the American Cancer Society figured that cancer strikes one in five.

This year the society has been forced to revise that figure upward. It now is one in four. The new estimate means that 40,000,000 Americans now living will develop cancer at some time in their lives.

Through the Salk vaccine, polio finally has been slowed down. Cancer, however, remains as one of the greatest unsolved health problems of the world. Until research finds its cause and cure, millions will continue to die from it.

Medical science's knowledge concerning cancer still is limited. Only one-quarter of those afflicted with cancer recover. Nevertheless, half of those who die of it, die needlessly, because they did not know how to take advantage of the knowledge that already is ours.

The American Cancer Society is leading the fight against the killer on these three fronts: research, education and service to cancer patients. Funds of the society are devoted to seeking the cause and cure of cancer, teaching persons to recognize the symptoms and seek early treatment, and in helping those who have contracted cancer.

The society is holding its annual drive now. Funds raised by public subscription in Atlanta and Georgia will join dollars from other states in the three-headed attack.

Will a cancer cure ever be found? Certainly. And probably through research backed by public subscription.

Don't Break a Leg To Save a Dollar!

So you're one of the growing army of "do-it-yourself" fans? Well, this new use of leisure time is well and good but a safety expert reminds us that it's not without its hazards.

Mr. Fixit, he says, might get a fatal electric shock on aluminum ladders, be blown up by wood or varnish dust, be set afire by paint sprays, poisoned by insecticides, incinerated in beds having fancy plastic trim or maimed by power tools. Then, too, they might get their fingers mashed in the old-fashioned way by hitting them with hammers.

The total injured and disabled annually has now climbed to a total of more than 600,000, according to Arthur A. Burroughs, of one of the leading insurance companies. These are broken down somewhat as follows:

One hundred and fifteen thousand people a year are injured as a result of doing their own carpentry; 98,729 have injuries as a result of making their own furniture; 95,000 are hurt while replacing broken window panes; 76,000 are casualties as a result of painting the outside of houses, and cleaning gutters and troughs accounts for 57,000 more.

Forty-seven thousand are hurt putting up or taking down storm windows; 33,000 accidents occur while trees are being pruned; 32,000 are hurt repairing roofs; 31,000 while doing interior painting and 16,400 while putting up TV antennas. Ladders were involved in 300,000 accidents, power tools in 180,000 and carpentry tools in 72,000 cases.

Still want to do it yourself?

Well, go ahead, but the statistics warn you there's a danger. In saving a dollar or so, be careful not to break a leg or burn up your house.

Washington Post

Some educators believe the figure will be doubled within 20 years; others say that this country will have from nine to 12 million students in college by 1975. Where will they go? The answer seems to lie in the creation of new universities, and many of these will necessarily have to be publicly financed.

There are disadvantages, of course, in starting from scratch to build a great institution of learning. But every university has to have a beginning some time. This age of evolution in educational demands must necessarily be creative in this field or it will fall miserably in its obligation to the oncoming generation. One good look at the continued high birth rate and the increasing demands for college training people in nearly all walks of life should remove any lingering doubt about the need for educational founders in the year 1955. The question of how to initiate this kind of expansion in education is one to which the philanthropic foundations might well give more attention.

Would Consolidating Some Georgia Counties Provide Funds for the University System?

East Point—The Atlanta newspapers are to be complimented for their great public service in publishing the recent series of articles by Miss Shannon and Mr. Spaulding on the subject of the problems facing the Georgia University System.

As so clearly demonstrated by your writers, there are few weaknesses in the system that ample funds would not remedy.

May I humbly and respectfully suggest another series of articles to throw the searchlight of publicity on a little-known source of additional state funds: A drastic reduction in the absurdly large number of obsolete county governments cluttering up the state—each with its tax-consuming hierarchy of officials.

The proposed series could cover such topics as the great drain on the public pocketbook caused by unnecessary counties; a survey of the outstanding studies in the field of consolidation; the vast duplication of overhead; an estimate of the savings to be achieved by consolidation; and how the present horse and buggy structure of county government can be streamlined and adapted to the age of the automobile, the airplane, and the vital functions of local government.

Obviously the savings resulting from county consolidation would not automatically flow into the coffers of the universities. The point is that reducing the waste in one major area would make greater resources available for redistribution.

Obviously the political obstacles in the way of reducing the number of counties are tremendous, almost insurmountable. Nevertheless, well-informed public opinion can accomplish near-miracles, as you gentlemen so well know. Equally obvious is the long-range nature of such an achievement.

I think such a series would complement your university series and would be very interesting and informative reading.

Atlantans Urge That Ike Wage War Now

Atlanta—Why does not President Eisenhower declare to us today:

"You ask what is our policy? I will say: It is to wage war, by sea, land and air, with all our might and with all the strength that God can give us; to wage war against a monstrous tyranny, never surpassed in the dark, lamentable catalogue of human crime. That is our policy. You ask what is our aim? I can answer in one word: Victory. Victory at all costs, victory in spite of terror, victory, however long and hard the road may be."

REALIST.

Information Slanted Regarding Strikers

Dallas—Your attitude toward strikes and strikers is one that is fairly prevalent, though humorously incongruous.

In times of labor-management peace, political orators extol the right to strike as something sacred. "Look at the American worker. He is free. He can strike," they say. But when strikes occur there is a distinct reversal of form. The strikers find themselves depicted by newspapers like The Atlanta Constitution as persons who are trying to ruin the country. All acts of vandalism and violence are attributed to the strikers, either openly or by insinuation, even though management stands to benefit more by these acts than the strikers.

All news that is calculated to weaken the strike is printed. Information that would have an opposite effect is mostly suppressed.

The Fight to the Finish

Point of No Return Waits for All Men

At hand is a copy of a sermon written by the Rev. Bevel Jones on "The Point of No Return." He is the beloved pastor of the Audubon Forest Methodist Church in Atlanta and one of the most interesting preachers one will ever hear. I find his sermon most challenging and briefly it may be summarized as follows:

One of the most important principles of flying in an airplane is the point of no return. If a plane carries a certain amount of fuel to get to a particular destination, it can go only so far from the place of departure with the possibility of returning. From that point on there is no returning. This principle applies to life. As the philosopher Nietzsche said:

"There is a time, we know not when, there is a place, we know not where, that marks the destiny of men, for glory or despair."

In the story Jesus told, the Prodigal Son did return home but there is a point beyond which a prodigal cannot return. Something in him dies, and he no longer thinks of the better life in his father's house. Also this applies to religious faith and practice. One can go on postponing decisions and duty and devotion, waiting for more convenient seasons to make crucial commitments until he loses the capacity to decide for God. The Bible says, "Seek the Lord while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near." One can lose God and never miss Him.

On the other hand, also one can pass the point of no return on the way that leads to life eternal. Babe Ruth, in one of his conversations with Grantland Rice, revealed the secret of his power to hit home runs. Said the immortal

"King of Swat": "Once I have begun my swing, there is no stopping it; it is all or nothing." And that is the disposition Christ wants in those of us who follow Him — all or nothing.

Just as Columbus set sail with never a thought of turning back, so must we on life's highest ventures. Take for example marriage. The ceremony reads: "And forsaking all others, keep thee only unto her or him so long as ye both shall live." This must be the intention. There should be no mental reservation. It is all or nothing.

And that is what it means to be a Christian. As Kierkegaard says, "To be a Christian is simply to be gripped by an idea for which one is willing to live and die" — not simply to be able to recite the Apostle's Creed — not merely to read the New Testament — but to start down this "straight and narrow" path with Christ and go beyond the point of a possible return. The trouble with many is they doubt, they hold back, they refuse to give all. The Kingdom of God lies just beyond the point of no return. May we have the faith to go that far!

This brief summary does not do justice to the fine sermon of Bevel Jones but as one realizes there is a "point of no return," it will cause him to consider well the ways he is traveling in life.

Fairness Returned To Tax Collecting

WASHINGTON—You may—or may not—like the way the government is spending your money but you can be confident today that the government is collecting it with an unusual degree of fairness and efficiency.

The credit goes to Congress for giving the President authority to take the Internal Revenue Service out of politics and to Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews for using to the hilt his new authority to reform and reorganize the whole service.

Here is an up-to-date accounting of the principal actions and principal achievements which justify give heart to the taxpayer:

When Commissioner Andrews took office in February, 1953, the morale of the service was so shattered that good men were leaving at a rate which, unless stopped, would literally destroy the agency. I know one honest revenue agent who felt he couldn't buy a new car because his neighbors would think he was getting kick-backs. They were quitting faster than new people could be hired. This deterioration of morale and personnel has been arrested and the service is in the process of adding about 1,000 new agents a year.

The management of internal revenue has been substantially altered. The 17 regional commissioners, administering the 64 district offices, have been reduced to nine. Two reasons: to reduce the layers of officials supervising other officials and to decentralize authority to the field.

Time was when the Internal Revenue field office knew by instinct when "Washington would want to handle this."

For two years now not a single tax case has been taken away from the field and fixed in Washington. Put this down as Andrews doctrine and Andrews practice.

To promote the widest understanding of the tax laws and to improve the way they are carried out Commissioner Andrews is using new training devices at the bottom and at the top. This year he sent instruction kits to every high school so that youngsters can learn to make out the income tax returns. This year he launched an advanced training center at the University of Michigan where selected agents get specialized training from leaders of the academic, professional and business worlds.

Andrews is doing his best to make internal revenue as shining as the taxpayers' dollar and at this point his best looks awfully good. He likes people and hates phonies. He is the kind of person who prefers to make his own phone calls and a dozen times a day some official in the field or a secretary at the home office will pick up the receiver and hear: "This is Coleman Andrews; how are you today?"

The Internal Revenue is feeling his presence in more ways than one—and is the better for it.

Political Campaigns Could Hinge on TV

WASHINGTON—How much of a campaign asset—and necessity—television has come to be regarded is being emphasized directly and indirectly in current Senate privileges and elections subcommittee hearings on the bill sponsored by Sen. Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D-Mo) for revision of existing laws regulating campaign expenditures.

Democrats, who traditionally have less money to spend in political campaigning than Republicans and regularly spend less as records over the years reveal, are especially concerned about how extensively they will be able to use television in future campaigns, including the 1956 presidential campaign.

Democrats also talk privately of the possibility of difficulties in getting their story told as completely as fairness demands if the control of communications facilities, including television, should get into the hands of fewer and fewer persons who might not be too kindly inclined to economic doctrines supported by the Democratic Party.

Reporters who have covered national campaigns closely know the difficulties met — even by presidential candidates on the Democratic ticket — in financing radio and television time. Recalled by this reporter was an episode in the Adlai Stevenson campaign of 1952. About 6:30 in the early evening the word came through the campaign train, then traveling in Ohio toward the end of the campaign, that Gov. Stevenson's speech at Cleveland about three hours later would be televised, instead of being carried only by radio. This was because he was replying to a speech attacking him and some of his aides by Sen. Joe McCarthy, which had been televised the night before and paid for by a group that included wealthy oil men.

We learned later what had been necessary to get the Stevenson speech televised. Campaign assistants had got on the telephone during the afternoon to contact persons who might contribute to finance a television half-hour for the Democratic candidate. Enough was pledged on the cuff to pay for the speech. Then arrangements were made for television time. The arrangements were completed so late, however, that it was impossible to get an announcement in the newspapers or a spot announcement on radio.

President Truman was on even leaner fare, campaign expense-wise, in 1948. Still vivid is the contrast between his campaign and that of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, the Republican candidate, especially in the West where this reporter traveled, alternately, on both campaign trains. Gov. Dewey had frequent state, regional and national radio hookups. President Truman had but very few, and on those occasions, campaign aides would get on the telephone and round up enough "angels" to finance them. It was a hand-to-mouth campaign, financially speaking.

Harry Truman did win, as you recall. So, perhaps Democrats are more worried about a fair break on television in the next campaign than they need to be.

Leo Aikman

Rainmaking Has Dark Aspects

Rain-making is a controversial subject in Bulloch County, according to Leodel Coleman, editor of The Bulloch Herald.

The issue arose following the meeting at Claxton in which drought-plagued farmers from a number of south-east Georgia counties pledged unified efforts in financing scientific rain makers.

"Some call it 'tampering with God's handiwork,'" Leodel says. (Some said the same thing in the 1880s when the railroads set up the system of standard time zones.)

"There are the scientific people," the Statesboro editor goes on, "who argue that 'rain modification' is no more 'tampering with God's handiwork' than adding fertilizer to the soil or use of irrigation systems."

Still a third group, the leg-mindless, see complications leading to possible litigation. For instance, Leodel suggests, a farmer could reason, "Right now I need rain, but later my cotton won't need rain and my neighbor, he orders rain on his corn and some of it spills over into my cotton. . . . I got my rights, haven't I?"

When it comes to ordering rain from the rainmaking company, there would be the owner of the ball club to consider and the chairman of the garden club's annual picnic.

The lawyers are right. The situation could become complex. The Coleman attitude is that the Lord would not have let man learn that clouds could be modified if He did not intend for him to use the knowledge. Leodel thinks rainmaking contracts should be carefully considered. He recognizes the desperate situation of the farmer. He sees the crisis as calling for desperate tactics. He just hopes this rainmaking business works out.

Down in Appling County, The Baxley News-Banner explains that the silver iodide particles that are blown into the clouds are so small 30,000 of them are no larger than a pinpoint. Which is getting weather making down to a fine point.

James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, wrote, "When God sorts out the weather and sends rain, W. W. rain's my choice."

But Jim Riley didn't live to see the day when God would give man an alternative.

I'm sorta like Leodel Coleman. I believe there's not much difference between turning rain on from a cloud and from a faucet. Except you've got to be considerate of the fellow that's got hay down and wants it dry.

Beloit (Wis.) News

The need for a larger and more effective highway patrol is evident to anyone using Wisconsin's principal highways.

On a recent night returning to Beloit from Madison, drivers of no less than three cars ducked out of their lane to pass on hills a string of cars moving at or near 55 miles an hour, jeopardizing their lives as well as the lives of others. To pass meant traveling at speeds of 65 or 70 miles an hour.

It's true that even with a state patrol of some 610 men every highway could not be patrolled nor would every accident be prevented. However, it seems certain that with a force of that size, drivers would be less inclined to flaunt the traffic laws as many do now.

Gabler Stifles Atlanta As Barons Romp, 10-2

Miscues Hurt Crax' Chances

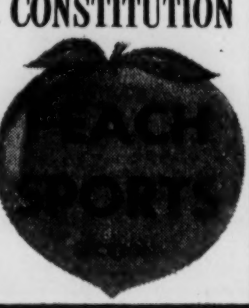

By JESSE OUTLAR

Birmingham mixed rookie John Gabler's strong hurling and Atlanta generosity Sunday to complete a three-game blitz, 10-2—the first time in at least six seasons that the Barons have swept a series at Ponce de Leon Park.

When it was over the Barons found themselves atop the Southern standings—a spot they have not occupied at the finish since 1931. Phil Page's men, who packaged the first two games, 6-5, and 1-0, didn't exactly take it all, for the Crackers were more to blame for loser Bill Tosheff's downfall than the Barons.

The 5,898 customers were still filling in, when the Crackers took themselves out of the running with some shoddy fielding in the three-run first.

Mighty Mouse Gene Hassell hit the fuse with a lead single, and Jerry Lampe poked a hit

Nashville Visits Poncey Tonight

past Jack Caro. Al Pilarcik, making no effort to dodge, took a soft pitch in the back, and the Barons had the bases jammed with none out. Tosheff disposed of Tom Hamilton, only man who didn't share in the 13-hit attack, and induced Country Brown to bang a DP roller to Frank DiPrima.

Instead of retiring two men to end the inning, the Crackers didn't retire any. DiPrima, after juggling the ball, flipped to Caro, who missed second, and all hands were safe, including Hassell at home.

Manager George McQuinn, figuring a new pitcher might change the Cracker luck, waved in Dick Kelly after Tosheff fed a ball to Bob Martyn. Kelly completed the walk, forcing in a run, and the winning marker followed after Bob Meisner lofted a fly to right.

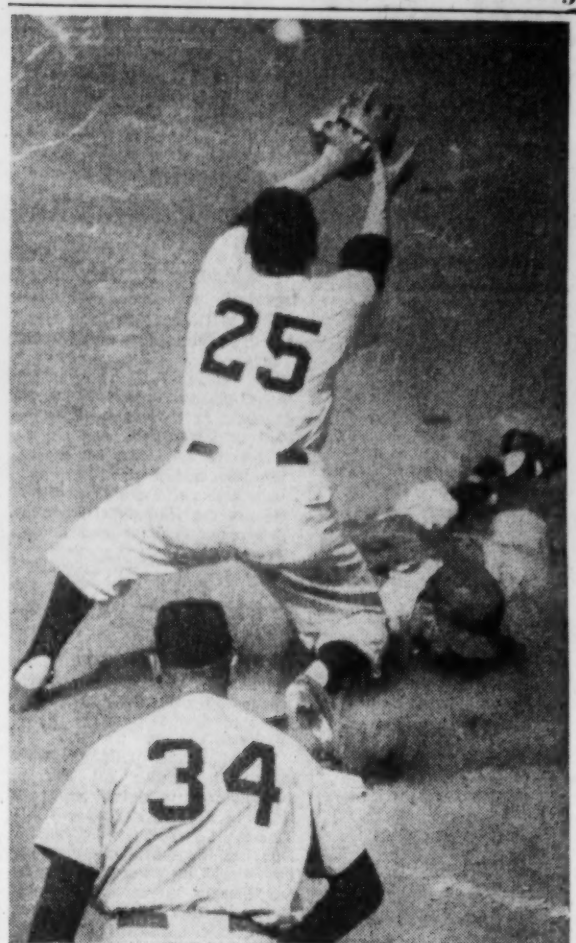

The Barons added five surplus scores in the third, and pecked away for singletons in the sixth and ninth. Meanwhile, Gabler hung a six-hit noose around the Crackers. Successive singles by Caro, DiPrima and Bob Montag ended a 14-inning famine in the third. Caro then unloaded his first homer in two years in the fifth to complete Cracker scoring.

With two out in the third, Brown worked Kelly for a walk and Martyn singled into right. This set the stage for Meisner's drive to right, which Sinovic played into a triple. Sinovic got his glove on the ball after a long run, but failed to hold it, and two runs counted. Morris Thacker shot a run-producing single into right, and came home when Bob Thorpe booted Gabler's hit to center.

Achieving no success against the Barons, the Crackers now brace for a four-game invasion by Nashville. McQuinn hasn't decided who'll hurl Monday's game. Two cars and 23 other gifts will be awarded lucky fans.

Dick Roberson, who rescued Kelly in the third, restored order till the sixth when Pilarcik's double and Brown's bloop single boosted the Baron bulge to 9-2. Bill Roland, who worked the last two stanzas, was nicked for a run in

CRACKER DIARY: Birmingham's Phil Page is a welcomed addition to Southern Association managerial society. "Baseball has been good to me," he said before Sunday's game, "and I expect my players to be good to baseball. When a fan pays his money, he wants to see the guys give it all they've got."

When Rob Thorpe, Dick Sinovic and Bob Montag don't hit, the Crackers won't do much scoring this season. In the last 20 innings, in which the Crackers cashed two runs, the trio had a combined 1-for-22.

CRAX FAIL TO SCORE WITH UMP BOB ROSS AFTER BARONS MAKE RUN

Arthur DALEY

New York Times Sports Columnist

Just Another DP to Leo

NEW YORK, April 17—They say that there can be no new plays in baseball. Yet it's quite possible that Jackie Robinson produced a new one on Wednesday. No baseball man this inquiring reporter questioned had seen it before and not all agreed on what should be done about it.

have got away with it against me. I'd have shot out of the dugout screaming. And I'd have insisted that the umpires call it a double play anyway. They'd hafta call it that way. They'd hafta.

"What rule did he violate? If it's deliberate interference, the umpire can call out the batter as well as the runner. It's a judgment play. The ump has to use his judgment just like when a base runner tries to take out the middle man at second in a double play. The runner isn't tagged but the umpire calls him out for leaving the baseline. It's a matter of judgment. Don't you agree?"

It so happened that his listener didn't agree at all. But before he had a chance to ask the Dandy Little Manager what specific rule supported his argument, the impetuous Frank Frisch added to the confusion. The Old Flash is still a manager at heart.

—The Umpires Prefer Not Presuming

"Sure it has to be called a double play," insisted the Flash with such emphasis that a listener quailed before his wrath. "It stands to reason that a runner can't be permitted to interfere with a double play. The umpires have to call both outs anyway."

Advice there was sought from several umpires, a breed of mankind which normally shuns newspaper controversy. The Men in Blue preferred to remain unidentified and only on that basis would they speak. Here's a composite quote:

"We agree with Leo," they began, "that deliberate interference with a double play is wrong. But there isn't a thing we can do about it. He can scream and rant all he likes but no umpire has a right to presume that a double play would have been made. Maybe the shortstop would have thrown the ball into right field. How do we know? And we hope the rules never are changed to cover the issue Robinson raised. Then it would be a matter of judgment, and an umpire's life is tough enough without having that complication added to it."

Warren Giles, the president of the National League and the final court of appeals for his circuit, was not so bashful as his umpires. He didn't object to going on record by name.

—It's Still One Out to a Customer

"There's nothing in the rules against the play in question," said Warren in his usual forthright fashion. "After I read in the papers about Robinson's maneuver, I checked back through the book and found nothing to prevent it. Leo can squawk and protest all he wants but I'm afraid it will be no avail."

Oddly enough, the stratagem was conceived by Pee Wee Reese, the captain of the Braves. He talked it over with Junior Gilliam and they agreed to try it if the situation arose. But Jackie beat them to it.

Whenever a ball player mangles an easy double play and gets only one out instead of two, he isn't charged with an error because the official scorer is instructed that he is "never to presume a double play would have been made." That has to apply to umpires, too. Durocher's blast has solid foundations in the field of common justice but none in the rule book.

But suppose Leo is correct. The only culprit—if culprit he be—would be the runner. He could be called out for being hit by a batted ball or he could be called out for interference. But not both. Baseball limits one out to each customer. Furthermore, the ball is dead once the runner has been hit by a batted ball. Can that second out be called when the game is in a state of suspended animation?

Admittedly this isn't a play which often will be seen. Yet it has assumed intriguing aspects.

Roberts, Dickson Put Clamps On Giants for 4-2 Phil Wins

Lopata Homer Helps Roberts in First Game; Singles Power Behind Dickson's Two-Hitter

NEW YORK, April 17 (AP)—The Philadelphia Phillies, behind the effective pitching of right-handers Robin Roberts and Murry Dickson, swept both ends of a double-header from the New York Giants today to climb into second place behind the unbeaten Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Phillies, in dumping the defending champions into a sixth place tie with Cincinnati, captured the first game in the 11th inning when Stan Lopata hammered a two-run homer off southpaw Johnny Antonelli.

Four successive second-inning singles by Smokey Burgess, Earl Torgeson, Willie Jones and Stan Palys and a two-run miff by outfielder Monte Irvin of Bobby Morgan's fly accounted for all of Philadelphia's runs in the second game.

Sal Maglie, making his second start in four days, suffered his second defeat in the nightcap. Both Giant runs off Dickson resulted from sacrifice flies. A fourth-inning single by Don Mueller and another one-bagger by Monte Irvin in the ninth were the only hits permitted by the 38-year-old Dickson.

Roberts, who whipped Antonelli by the same 4-2 score on Opening Day, allowed seven hits.

Redlegs End Loss Streak

CINCINNATI, April 17 (AP)—Ted Kluszewski singled with two out in the ninth inning to give his Cincinnati Reds their first victory of the 1955 National League season, a 6-5 triumph over the Milwaukee Braves in the second game of a doubleheader today.

The Braves plastered the Reds with their fifth straight setback, a 10-1 affair, in the first game.

Nats Turn on Lopat, Shell New York, 7-3

Vernon and Sievers Homer, Beat Nemesis for Schmitz

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—Ed Lopat, long-time Washington nemesis, was shelled for two-run homers by Mickey Vernon and Roy Sievers today as the Senators defeated the New York Yankees 7-3.

Johnny Schmitz, the winner, and Spec Shea restricted the Yankees to eight hits, three of them infield taps. Shea relieved Schmitz with two out in the ninth when the Yankees threatened.

The Yankees produced a run in the second inning after Bill Skowron singled and came around as the result of errors by Eddie Yost and Pete Runnels.

Trabert Lifts Dallas Title

DALLAS, April 17 (AP)—Tony Trabert upset defending champion Vic Seixas, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5, today to win the ninth annual Dallas Country Club Invitational Tennis tournament.

Only in the final set did Seixas, rated number one nationally, show indications of making a match of it. Trabert had him down, 5-3, and match point in the final set when Seixas rallied to pull the game out and take the next to even it at five-all. But Trabert pulled his game back in hand and swept the last two games, to close out the match.

Trabert, 25, won his fifth straight tournament over Seixas on the current tour that goes on to Houston for the River Oaks tournament tomorrow.

SURGERY WITHOUT ANESTHESIA

Godfrey Squabbles Grow Tiring

NEW YORK, April 17.—Arthur Godfrey has chosen an odd way to start his comeback. His decision to plow under a few of the Little Godfreys is no special surprise, but the form of his spring housecleaning would seem to suggest he is neither the most tidy nor tactful soul in television.

To his office on Friday afternoon he summoned his chosen victims—Marilyn Marlowe, Hal Klocke, The Mariners and three writers—and abruptly announced they were to walk the plank. If Godfrey is a good salesman, he is about the world's worst public relations man.

Scrapping all or part of a show is nothing new in the entertainment world, as Godfrey fairly noted. But if such surgery must be performed, Godfrey at least might have been gracious enough to supply a little anesthesia. Thoughtfulness for the feelings of others is one of the attributes of the real star.

A combination of panic and understandable opportunism explains Godfrey's behavior. The rating of his Wednesday night program has taken a nose-dive this season, partly because his show has been old and tired and partly because of competition from the fabulous "Disneyland."

Under normal circumstances next fall would have been the logical time for Godfrey to shake up his operation. Many shows get an overhauling during the summer. But presumably Godfrey felt the time was now ripe to launch a counterattack against "Disneyland," which at the moment is repeating its earlier programs of the year. Next fall, of course, Walt Disney will be coming along with another batch of premieres.

But Godfrey is far from a he-guy in closing the door permanently on his old friends and becoming a talent scout for Ed Sullivan, who picks up the Little Godfreys as they fall one by one. Since his show so desperately needs excitement he should have left the way open for return visits by Miss Marlowe et al. Even a reunion with Julius LaRosa, a Godfrey exile of an earlier year, would have been smart showmanship.

What Godfrey doesn't seem to realize is that all the backstage squabbles among his TV family are growing very boring and, far from being mere publicity incidents, could have a major and undesirable influence on his future career.

True, Godfrey has had a run of extremely bad luck with his hip and in large measure this may account for his brusque ways. Pain can do strange things to one's disposition. But so long as he elects to stay in the public eye, he must learn to live with his problem. He cannot expect everyone else to walk on eggs.

From a theatrical standpoint, Godfrey certainly has no legitimate beef. For the most part he has merely presented his radio shows in front of cameras. Now, with guest stars and other special events, he is going to give more attention to visual values and bring on some new faces. Both moves have been due for a year or more.

If Godfrey is to succeed in his new venture, however, he must find some way to end the petty and distasteful flare-ups. One possible course for Godfrey might be to take both his audience and his supporting cast into his confidence. On his morning show he could take time out to explain exactly what it is he is trying to do on TV.

In any case, there would seem one certainty: if Arthur can bring himself to forget l'affaire Godfrey, his audience can manage it, too.

ANOTHER "FIRST"—Betty Furness, an "old hand" in television, stars in a dramatic role during her first Studio One appearance at 10 p.m. on Channel 5 (CBS-TV). The actress, known for her expert delivery of commercials and as a quiz-mistress, will appear with screen star Jeff Morrow and Walter Hampden in "Affairs of State."

Kraft Show Will Be First To Mark 8 Years on Video

Special to Atlanta Journal-Constitution
NEW YORK, April 17.—Television's first celebration of a show's eighth anniversary will occur May 11, when Kraft Television Theater presents a 48th consecutive weekly full-hour live production.

The NBC-TV show—seen in Atlanta on WSB-TV's Channel 2—will mark the eighth birthday of the longest run in television.

TV's oldest show of any kind started May 7, 1947, with the production of video's first sponsored full-hour show.

The premiere Kraft production, "Double Door," was presented from tiny studio 3-B, a radio studio on a side corridor of NBC's Radio City. Kraft's Eighth Anniversary show will be presented from the giant Brooklyn color studio of NBC.

The difference in the size of studios and the elaborateness of production between the Kraft premiere and the anniversary show is a fair measure of the accomplishments in telecasting made by the industry and pioneered by Kraft Television Theater.

Some idea of what TV programming was like in 1947 can be had by noting that The New York Times TV log, which today lists 184 programs, listed only three programs the day Kraft gave its premiere.

Kraft Television Theater's position as a leader in television entertainment however, does not depend on the date of its premiere alone. In addition to the "firsts" directly connected with its premiere date, Kraft holds a number of distinguished television "firsts" including: the first commercial network show, the first show to be carried on the Midwest cable, the first show to prepare a drama for color telecast, and the first to present 104 full-hour live drama productions in one year.

Video Film Innovation Is Du Mont's

By VAL ADAMS
New York Times News Service
Special to Atlanta Constitution
NEW YORK, April 17.—The Du Mont network announced here what it called "an entirely new concept of network television."

The heart of the concept is Electronicam, a dual-purpose television and motion picture film camera developed by Du Mont. Demonstrated for the first time, it will permit Du Mont to ship its programs on film to affiliated stations instead of transmitting them live over coaxial cables.

Dr. Allen B. Du Mont, president of the Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, which operates the network, said:

"The Electronicam system delivers live television pictures of quality identical with that of current TV standards and simultaneously provides a movie film of quality equal to that of motion picture film. Its high quality supercedes all currently used methods for recording programs from the faces of cathode-ray tubes."

For delayed broadcasts, TV networks now film live programs off the face of a picture tube. Known as Kinescope films, these recordings are of inferior quality in comparison to the average motion picture films.

Edna Best Stars In Stark Drama On TV Tonight

Edna Best will star in "P. J. Martin and Son," grim drama of a mother's determination to control her family, when Robert Montgomery presents the American Tobacco Theater at 9:30 p.m. Monday on WSB-TV's Channel 2 (NBC-TV).

The play was written for television by Robert Shaw. The cast includes Lynn McCarthy, Jack Mullaney, Gloria Strook, Laurie March, Ann Dere, William Erwin, Raymond Bramley, and Philippa Bevans.

Miss Best plays a shrewd businesswoman who tries to apply business practices to running her children's lives.

Cantor To Recall 'Old Days' on ABC-TV
Eddie Cantor will recall "the good old days" to many early radio-listeners—now also TV fans—on the Eddie Cantor Comedy Theater telecast Monday night.

Cantor, starring on the show seen by Atlantans on Channel 11 (ABC-TV) at 9:30 p.m. Monday, will sing "I Love To Spend," his old theme song.

The "banjo-eyed" Cantor plays a man trying to make a come-back.

Chairman of the Georgia Associated Press. He succeeded Jack Tarver of The Atlanta Journal and Constitution.
Jack J. Cubbage of the Savannah Morning News and Evening Press was elected vice chairman. Cubbage and his associates will be hosts at the 1956 meeting in Savannah.
The association adopted resolutions of grief and condolence upon the death of 15 Georgia newsmen during the past year.
Sunday's session was preceded by a Saturday night meeting of the AP News Council presided over by Louis C. Harris of the Augusta Chronicle.

TOP JUDGING TEAM
Malcolm Johnson, editor of the Tallahassee Democrat and one of the judges in the newswriting contest, handed out the certificates and checks to the writers. Marshall Lumsden, Life correspondent in Atlanta, and Robert W. Kelly, Life photographer, made the picture awards.
Other newswriting judges were J. E. Chaffin, managing editor of the Greenwood (S. C.) Index-Journal and Robert P. Mahon Jr., associate editor of the Jackson (Tenn.) Sun.
The agreement among the judges was remarkable in this year's competition. Of the nine top winners, six received first place ratings by all three judges. The other three first place winners were picked first by two judges and second by the third.

essential for self-preservation until such time when the Communists may change their minds and hearts and agree to a universal system of disarmament, including the prohibition of nuclear weapons," Jamali said in a statement. known, lest this nation be disillusioned.
He spoke positively on the possibility that "concrete plans for new discussions with the Soviet Union" could be made at a meeting of foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in early May. That same NATO meeting also plans to admit the West German government to its councils—a step bitterly fought by the Kremlin.

POINTS TO IMPLICATIONS

The big news of the Dulles-Eisenhower talk, however, was his reference to an intensified Red offensive air buildup on the mainland of China.

In a formal statement released by the White House, Dulles put it this way:
"In relation to China, we discussed the grave implications of an extensive buildup, now in progress, by the Chinese Communists of offensive air power on the China mainland opposite Formosa."

Talking with reporters, Dulles told them this was a new development "more intensive and broader in scope" that had become known to this government only in the last few days.

AVOIDS PREDICTION

He was asked if this increased the capabilities of imminent attack by the Chinese Reds in the Formosa Straits.

"Distinguishing between capabilities and intentions," Dulles replied, "I would say it indicates a higher degree of capabilities than we were aware of a few weeks ago."

He avoided any forecast of what the Chinese Reds might do—that is, their intentions—in accordance with a presidential statement warning his highest advisers they did not possess "crystal balls" and therefore were in "no position to forecast accurately enemy moves. That statement was made by the President during a controversy over published statements attributed to Adm. Robert B. Carney, Navy chief of operations, declaring the Chinese Reds might be ready to move in the Formosa Straits by mid-April, with an attack on Matsuyama coming first.

RETURNS TO CAPITAL

A reporter asked the secretary of state whether the President had reached a firm decision as to whether this country would defend Matsuyama and Quemoy if they are attacked.

Dulles smiled, and waved his arm in farewell as he started out of the door, heading for the airport to fly back to Washington. In his prepared statement, Dulles spoke of the Austrian-Soviet treaty agreement as "the first fruits of a policy of patient street and drove her to Chickamauga Park, a government reservation.

The park is in Walker County, Georgia, although only about six miles from downtown Chattanooga.

The break in the case came early Sunday morning when Allen asked an Atlanta police officer at Terminal station to inform the FBI of his presence in this city. FBI agents immediately went to the station to see Allen. Bice was arrested at the home of a friend on Peters street, SW, while Krull was taken into custody at the Gordon Hotel on Mitchell street, SW.

If convicted on rape and kidnap charges, the men face the maximum death penalty. If convicted on a lesser charge of transporting an automobile, they face a maximum penalty of five years in jail or a $5,000 fine, or both.

Allen told FBI agents he had received training as a watchmaker by the Tennessee State Rehabilitation Service, but that he earned a living selling small surgical dressings on downtown Chattanooga streets.

He is only four feet six inches tall, and weighs only 80 pounds. This is a contrast to the six feet, 165 pounds of Bice, and the five feet eleven, 160 pounds of George Krull.

The wanted Krull is five feet eight, and weighs 120 pounds.

was, therefore, "an encouraging development . . . if the full facts do not disillusion us, which they might."

"It makes a Big Four conference seem in prospect to be more desirable than would have been the case if the Soviet Union had refrained from agreement on the Austrian treaty," he said.

LEAVING FOR REST

The talk between the President and his secretary of state covered the whole field of foreign relations. It was arranged here, not because of any emergency, but because Dulles is scheduled to leave Washington on Wednesday for a long weekend before Eisenhower returns from August. He customarily has a regulated "deeds not words" far long conference with the President every Monday, in addition to other meetings at irregular intervals during the week.

take cover and short blasts meant "all clear."

CD planners say it may take months to inform everyone about the change.

And, even if every Atlantian knew the new signal, only about half the people within the city limits could hear the 30 sirens blaring at various locations, they said.

The wail would not be heard in most office buildings if windows were closed.

"Getting instructions to people would be our most pressing problems and understand their message. More might be warned by telephone or word of mouth.

Still others might get the warning from an emergency radio set-up called "Conelrad."

The moment a striking force of enemy bombers is identified by Air Force radar or volunteer spotters at Ground Observer Corps lookouts, the mechanism to put "conelrad" into operation would begin to function.

A few persons might hear the The Air Force would alert all Atlanta radio stations, which would immediately go off the air, advising listeners to switch their dials to 640 or 1240 kilocycles. Within one minute, broadcasting would begin on these "Conelrad" frequencies.

"The Conelrad" program, which would convey evacuation instructions, information on what was happening and reassurances from local leaders, would be transmitted intermittently on low power by six or seven stations, each sending for periods of 10 seconds or less.

Listeners probably would be oblivious of the transmission set-up except to notice their reception wavers a little.

The erratic transmission, which would follow no discernible pattern, is designed to confuse enemy bomber pilots who try to "home" their planes on regular radio beams or divert guided missiles designed to find their targets by the beams.

"Conelrad" could be put in operation within 90 seconds, CD planners say. But it could continue only if special telephone lines linking the stations remained intact and if transmitting power were available.

If enemy bombers take the most likely course, approaching from the North Pole, Atlanta probably would get a warning of four hours or more.

Even with CD plans in their present somewhat nebulous state, four hours probably would be long enough to communicate the warning and evacuate most of Atlanta's people, CD officials said.

Tech, Lockheed Cooperate
To Improve Wind Tunnel

Georgia Tech and the Lockheed Aircraft Corp.'s Georgia division will cooperate in a $75,000 program to modernize the nine-foot wind tunnel at Tech's Guggenheim School of Aeronautics.

The improved wind tunnel will be in full operation by Jan. 1, 1956, according to Dr. Blake R. Van Leer, president of Georgia Tech. It will be used by Lockheed to test new designs for aircraft as well as for applied research.

The tunnel, located on the Tech campus, was built in 1932 and was used extensively by a number of aircraft companies during World War II. Under the improvement plan, winds approximately 30 per cent greater than previously possible will be created by huge fans driven by a more powerful electric motor. The tunnel now can generate winds faster than those inside famed Hurricane Hazel.

WORRY CLINIC

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Before Divorce, Wife Should Seek Cause

Teresa J., 29, offers a very common wife problem. "Dr. Crane, last month I wrote a letter to a woman advice columnist," she began.

"I told her that I have been married eight years and have two wonderful children—a boy of 7 and a girl, aged 6.

"My husband is generous enough with us as regards money and even admits that he loves me.

"But he gets so angry at times that he calls me names and belittles me, even before the children.

"Lately, he has also started criticizing my parents, too. When he is on a tirade, there's nothing I can do to stop him.

"But I love him and the children are crazy about him. What should I do in this dilemma?

"Well, Dr. Crane, this woman columnist wrote back and told me if I had even average intelligence, I should divorce him at once.

"But that isn't what I want. So could you give me some psychological help that would salvage our marriage? I don't want a broken home."

REQUIRES TRAINING

Modern physicians are trained above all else to get an accurate diagnosis of the problem and its cause.

Psychologists likewise don't flippantly recommend divorce in a case like Teresa's.

And that is why I told you last week that conducting an "advice" column demands a lot of scientific training of medicine and psychology, plus a great deal of "horse sense" or practical judgment.

We psychologists, therefore, would focus Teresa's attention on the basic cause for her husband's fits of anger.

Some excessively jittery people have an excess secretion of the thyroid gland of the neck. Thus, they fly off the handle on very slight provocation.

Others have simply developed as spoiled "brats" ever since childhood and try to alibi their tantrums by calling it "temperament."

SEX EGO WOUNDED

But Teresa's husband didn't fit into either one of those two types. His sex ego had been wounded by his wife's apparent indifference, so he grew caustic and tried to whittle down her pride to an even lower point than his own.

This is a common psychological device. For instance, a bed-wetting boy feels babyish in his own sight. So he will often become a bully at school and tease other boys, as well as girls, till he makes them cry. Why?

Because their tears label them as babyish, so he then feels somewhat superior and thus helps offset his secret belief that he is still at the diaper stage.

There are two marriage secrets that all new brides should realize. First, feed your husband when he is hungry. Don't make him wait till you get the extra frills ready, such as salad or whipped cream for the pie.

But the second basic hunger in the male is erotic. And wives are relatively frigid as measured by the average male's sex appetite. So wives often are indifferent or reluctant.

And this attitude makes a husband irate. He may feel that his wife doesn't love him.

And in the resulting bitterness, he snarls and calls her names, and even belittles her parents.

Craving Mushrooms? Select Real McCoy

Emperor Nero gave one of the most deadly banquets in the history of mankind. Poisonous mushrooms were served and all the guests, guards, and gate crashers died. According to Jane Rockwell, among the thousands of other famous persons in various eras who were poisoned by these fungi were Pope Clement VII, Emperor VI, the widow of Czar Alexis, and the wife and children of Euripides.

Mushrooms and toadstools have been steeped in mystery throughout the ages because the realization of their toxicity passed down from one generation to another. But we now know that the majority are edible: it was the harmful varieties that gave the vegetable its notorious reputation.

In all, there are more than 2,000 species that differ in color, texture, taste, and odor. The best known is Agaricus campestris, which is found in pastures and grassy places. The top is white and the pink gills later change to brown.

The Amanita muscaria contains the poison, muscarine. Eating this substance usually produces vomiting, abdominal pain, diarrhea, intense thirst, and profuse perspiration. The pupils of the eyes contract and the victim may go into convulsions and coma.

The more deadly Amanita phalloides also leads to gastrointestinal distress along with excess salivation, circulatory failure, and damage to the liver and kidneys.

Both specimens have white gills and spores and grow in clusters on wet or shady ground. They have a bitter taste and yield a pungent milk.

The stomach should be rid of the poison quickly by inducing vomiting or washing out the organ repeatedly with a stomach tube. A saline cathartic aids in eliminating any of the noxious material that reaches the intestine. Atropine acts as an antidote for muscarine but it must be administered carefully. Sedatives also may be prescribed to calm the nervous system.

Over the years, many tests have been devised to determine the safety of mushrooms but as a rule they are value-

This Husband-Wife Garden Team Shares the Title of President

By YOLANDE GWIN
Mr. and Mrs. E. Fay Pearce of 339 Beverly Rd., N.E., are known throughout the South as the "gardening couple."

These two prominent Atlantans, sharing a mutual interest in flowers, also share the title of president.

Mrs. Pearce has just been elected head of the Northwood Garden Club succeeding Mrs. Arthur Pew Jr. Upon the organization of the Georgia Daffodil Society, members named Mr. Pearce as their first president.

The Northwood Club, formed in 1937, has 36 members and has as its project the beautification of the grounds at Grady Hospital. A member group of the Atlanta Flower Show Assn.,

Northwood Club members have many blue ribbons to their credit for horticultural and arrangement perfection.

A SECRET
Mrs. Pearce has revealed a secret about the May meeting of the club. The original members will re-enact their organization meeting—complete with costumes of nearly a score of years ago.

Mr. Pearce, also a member of the Atlanta Men's Garden Club and a vice president of the Southern region of the National Daffodil Society, is one of the few men who hold honorary membership in a club "strictly for the girls." He carries with pride his card as a member of the Iris Garden Club.

Along with Charles Hudson, of the Men's Garden Club, Mr. Pearce has been instrumental in organizing similar men's groups in several Georgia cities.

JUDGES
Mr. and Mrs. Pearce are horticultural judges, and together have picked the winners at shows in Macon, West Point and Jenkinsburg, to name a few.

They have concentrated their interest and their work on narcissi, irises and camellias. Their garden boasts some 265 varieties of iris, 523 types of narcissi and over a hundred camellia plants.

As a "home team" Mr. and Mrs. Pearce really scored at the recent camellia show in Birmingham, Ala., held in conjunction with the meeting of the American Camellia Society.

With their entry, "Iwawie Shiori," the Atlanta couple won "best in the show" honors as well as a silver bowl for the best camellia grown outdoors in a northern district.

HOW LONG?
And how long have the Pearces been gardeners?
"I'd say about 15 years," said Mrs. Pearce. "And each year we became more and more interested. We plan our garden together, select our bulbs and plants together and work them together."

And why did they select these particular bulbs?
"Mrs. Stuart Gould gave me my first iris, and as I had heard my aunt rave so about those she saw in California, I decided I'd try my hand with them," said Mr. Pearce.

30 TYPES
"As for the narcissi, I sat beside Jake Harris at a garden club meeting once and he asked me if I'd ever planted any. When I told him I hadn't he suggested I try. Before I could start shopping around and studying the different varieties, he sent me a package of 30 different types."

And the result?
Winning blue ribbons and silver trophies has become a hobby which is running the gardening a close second with Mr. and Mrs. Pearce.

Tobe Says

Long Overblouse Look for Summer

It's been a long time since I've seen a new fashion sweep through the whole fashion field as quickly as the long overblouse look is doing right now.

It first appeared both as a real overblouse and in two-piece dresses in the Paris collections last August.

It's now spread its influence to sweaters, to cotton T-shirts and to all sorts of sportswear as well.

In fact, the look of the summer for country or beach life will be the long loose overblouse over some sort of tight-fitting pants.

HALF-SIZES PERFECT FOR 5'4" AND UNDER
Mrs. Laura Mobley Selects Slenderizing Two-Piece Cotton

Half-Size Fashions Are Cut for Better Fit

By MARY GRAY ANDERSON

Many women have a tendency to shy away from half-size clothes because the size indicates to them unyouthful designs for mature figures only.

Due to this misconception about dresses and suits in this size category, women with short-waisted proportion problems are missing a wonderful opportunity to get better fit in their clothes.

What half-size actually means is that the clothes have been scaled down in proportion. They are found to be perfect for the 5' 4" and under figure, and thereby eliminate costly alteration so often necessary in regular-size dresses.

Styles in spring and summer half-sizes are as youthful and becoming as any woman could wish for them to be. Lacy-textured rayons have cotton lace inserts and are lightly dotted with rhinestones. Cottons have a young-at-heart, cool look.

Necklines are softened with tiny turned-up collars and bow trims. Skirts have just enough flare to be flattering to the short, petite woman.

In this size range there are wonderful afternoon and party dresses delicately feminine; casual wear with fresh, attractive appeal for shopping trips and to wear at home. Tailored suits with a smart look, such as the check cotton with velvet buttons shown here, make perfect traveling outfits.

Mrs. Laura Mobley liked the youthful, slenderizing look in half-sizes so well that she chose several to take on her forthcoming trip to Sea Island.

Those clothes, in sizes 14½ to 20½, are available in Atlanta. For shopping information call WA. 5050, Ext. 394.

Brazilian Author To Visit Here

Dr. Muriel Harn and other members of the Spanish department at Agnes Scott will entertain at luncheon for the visitor on Wednesday. Celestine Sibley This Big Town Has Forgotten

The plight of Miss Mary C. Calhoun, the 89-year-old gentlewoman who is caught between the upper and nether grindstones of poverty and red tape, is something for us all to consider.

In these cozy days of public welfare and social security and various pension plans it's easy to get the idea that nice people never starve.

Don't believe a word of it.

Miss Calhoun is "nice people."

Her ancestors contributed brilliantly to the building of Atlanta. They fought off Indians and Sherman and his arsonists in wartime and in peace they continued to serve.

They were builders, church founders, lawmakers, public servants. And how the old house on Washington street, which stands between Miss Calhoun and a little relief check, missed being bought up and turned into a memorial of some kind is just one of those flukes.

Franklin Garrett's three-volume "Atlanta and Environs" is punctuated with references to Miss Calhoun's grandfather, the Civil War mayor of Atlanta, and to her father, the mayor who greeted Sherman when he made his return, peacetime call on Atlanta in 1879.

In the hot city election of 1878, William Lowndes Calhoun piled up a sizzling score of 2,509 votes to 1,898 for James Warren English and 162 for Daniel Pike Hill.

Writes Mr. Garrett:

"The new mayor had been a resident of the Atlanta area all of his life, having been born in Decatur in 1837, a son of James M. Calhoun, wartime mayor of the city. W. L. Calhoun was admitted to the bar in 1857, and became the partner of his father.

"During the war he served gallantly in the Confederate army at Knoxville, Vicksburg, Baker's Creek, and in Johnston's retreat from Dalton to Resaca, at which latter point he was wounded. He emerged from the struggle with the rank of captain and immediately resumed the practice of law with his father. From 1873 to 1876 he served as a representative in the State Legislature.

"Among the landmarks of his term as mayor were the funding of the city's floating debt of $600,000 from a high to a 6 per cent rate of interest, and the procuring of legislation necessary for the inauguration of a street paving system for Atlanta."

After he served out his term as mayor, Mr. Calhoun's name was linked with every enterprise for the betterment of the town. He was on the Cotton States Exposition committee. He worked for the building of the Georgia Railroad.

He was president of the John B. Gordon Monument Assn., which raised the money to finance the Gordon monument now on the Capitol lawn. (Mr. Garrett calls it "Atlanta's handsomest monument and its only equestrian statue.")

The statue was executed in bronze by Solon H. Borglum, brother of Gutzon Borglum and was unveiled on May 25, 1907, with music and speeches by many people, among them an address on the monument's history by Mr. Calhoun.

Mr. Calhoun's father saw a burning, dying city through its darkest hours and came back to rebuild it.

But a town forgets easily. The contributions of the Calhoun family are in the history books. They are of no use to Miss Mary today, when she needs a little money to see her through a life which at 89 must be near its end.

It's a big, progressive town now—and it has forgotten.

Sneaky Calories Ease on Pounds

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Corpulent calories sneak up on us... and the pounds ease on unnoticed. When over the years, five, ten, fifteen or twenty pounds come on, they seem so much a part of our person as to lull us into complacency.

This is reflected in almost all the letters. In today's letter, our overweight was blithely unaware of the steadily accumulation of fat, until one fine day just a year ago, she suddenly realized she was 30 pounds heavier than when she married.

"I didn't gain much at a time—maybe five pounds a year, but the years go by so fast. Last February I woke up to the unbelievable fact that I was up to 170 pounds, with a 33-inch waist.

When I married I weighed a neat 125 pounds and wore size 12. By the time I decided to take action, I was lucky to be able to squeeze into a size 20.

"Then one fine day toward the end of February, there was just a hint of spring in the air. Perhaps that is what did it, for I suddenly became painfully aware of the shape I was in. I realized that my husband had to look at that shape! Although he never once said anything about it, I knew he couldn't be proud of the way I looked—any more than I was.

"That day I started eating to reduce and exercising to get a better shape. By July I was able to wear a size 14 with a 27-inch waist. I weighed 125 pounds. Did I ever feel better too?

"But to go back a bit... I purposely didn't mention my reducing plan to my husband. It wasn't until I got down to 145 pounds that he suddenly realized I really had been overweight, and

I could see he was pleased that I had decided to be normal weight again.

"When I reached 125 pounds which is pleasing weight for my height, he was so proud and happy. If women would only realize that their husbands love them, but they want to be able to take them out and be proud of them too....

"I can tell overweighters from my experience that you do not have to starve to reduce. I had plenty to eat and lost two pounds a week."

There is a woman with that rare quality, common sense. She saw what her daily food habits were doing to her figure and quietly and firmly set about to change them. She didn't look for some magic pill—she simply followed the scientific pattern of eating that reduced her weight two pounds a week and changed her food habits. With her new food habits, keeping normal weight will be a pleasure.

the body means a general lower-

Dr. Leigh's announcement. "In these days of increased demands upon our nervous systems, it is important that they are function-special clinic is to investigate the causes of nervous tension... and to dispel them where possible."

In answer to many requests, the Superior Aluminum Awning
Co., located at 1184 Pryor St.,
SW, announces that they are

In addition, Superior manufactures, distributes and installs the nationally popular Superior aluminum awnings for doors, casement and conventional windows, porches, carports, terraces, canopies, store fronts, etc. They also offer glass jalousies for win-

(1) they add to the attractiveness, and enhance the value of your home; (2) they assure added comfort in reducing by several degrees the temperature of your room or enclosure, and add substantially to the efficiency of your air-conditioning unit. Enclosures are protected from rain and dampness, thereby effecting savout woodwork and other maintenance costs. The all-white underneath enamel coating permits the proper soft, diffused light to enter the room or enclosure; and, (3)

they are manufactured of the fin-

—AT NO EXTRA COST.

"SUPERIOR" Aluminum Awnings are guaranteed against rust, sag or warp. They are fire-proof, and because of the fine baked-on enamel process applied to the materials, their beautiful luster finish assures years of wear.

ufactured in Atlanta (another home product), and have already gained much popularity for en-

When Termites Are Swarming Call 'Otto' the Orkin Man

If you have seen swarming insects near your property, call "Otto" the Orkin Man for a free inspection.

Termite swarming is a sign that termite nests are nearby and this may be the only warning you will have, even though they may have been silently working on the timbers of your home for a long time—yes, termites work unseen all year 'round. In a way, termite swarming can be a blessing, else many a hapless homeowner would never be aware of the damage being done to his investment.

The termites shown in the above photograph swarmed from the baseboard of a room one warm spring day. When Orkin had completed its thorough inspection, it was discovered that considerable repairs were necessary before this house could be pronounced termite-free and a surety-bond issued to protect the owner from future problems. A free inspection by the Orkin Exterminating Company could have uncovered these home-wreckers, before the damage was done.

Orkin termite control is known throughout 27 states, the District of Columbia and the Island of Cuba. New and improved scientific methods of termite control are constantly being offered by ORKIN technicians. More efficient techniques to cut costs which can be passed on to the customer and yet maintain the improved high quality are under continued study by the ORKIN Technical Department.

TELL-TALE WARNING!—It's the automatic signal to call Otto the Orkin Man, EM. 4541, when you see termites swarming near your property. Accompanying story explains Orkin Exterminating Company's dependable protection methods.

Boasting a staff of trained engineers and servicemen with many years' experience, ORKIN termite control is not a one-step "quickie" operation. The ORKIN system is to apply many known and proven methods, all adding to more effective control and secured safety against termite damage. Ground and wood treatment with the finest toxic chemicals available and positive insulation to form a physical barrier to termite entry from the ground are only part of ORKIN's scientific treatment.

Wherever necessary, ORKIN will replace sills, joists and other damaged wood. A SURETY bond, not just a warranty bond or written guarantee, forms a part of each ORKIN termite contract. This bond, which is insured by one of America's leading insurance and bonding companies (name on request) assures absolute and unconditional performance.

In addition to termite control, the World's Largest Pest Control Company now offers ORKIN TOX, the pipe system (patented Hill pipe) of triple protection against termites, beetles and decay. ORKIN-TOX, installed during construction, will go a long way toward reducing the 100 million dollars in annual termite damage.

To have your property checked by a trained ORKIN inspector, all you have to do is call EMerson 4541. He will gladly make a thorough and detailed inspection and submit a complete report to you, at no cost or obligation. So when you see swarming termites, don't be alarmed. Call Orkin, EMerson 4541, for a free inspection.

In addition to termite treatment, ORKIN offers a complete pest control service which includes control of rats, mice, ants, roaches, flies, moths, silverfish and other general insects. Fumigation and food plant sanitation are also available to industry through ORKIN, the World's Largest Pest Control Company.

Coolair Units Approved for Home, Industry

The quietest and most powerful Coolair Attic and Exhaust Fans ever developed to keep homes, offices and plants cool and comfortable in hot weather are now available in a variety of sizes for Coolair dealers, according to special announcement today from the John L. Underwood Co., Inc., 555 Whitehall St., SW, Coolair factory representative in this area.

"Not only are the 1953 Coolair fans improved over previous models, but prices will be slightly lower this year," said John L. Underwood, head of the firm, in the announcement. "As with all Coolair attic fans, these new models are tested and rated in accordance with the standard A.S.H.&V.E. test code."

With warmer weather already here—and those hot, scorching days just around the corner—Coolair dealers are now getting ready to fill orders from home and property owners. Coolair fans come in sizes ranging from 26 inches to nine feet, and are designed for easy installation in old or new construction. They are sold by reputable electrical, mill and building supply houses who are authorized Coolair dealers.

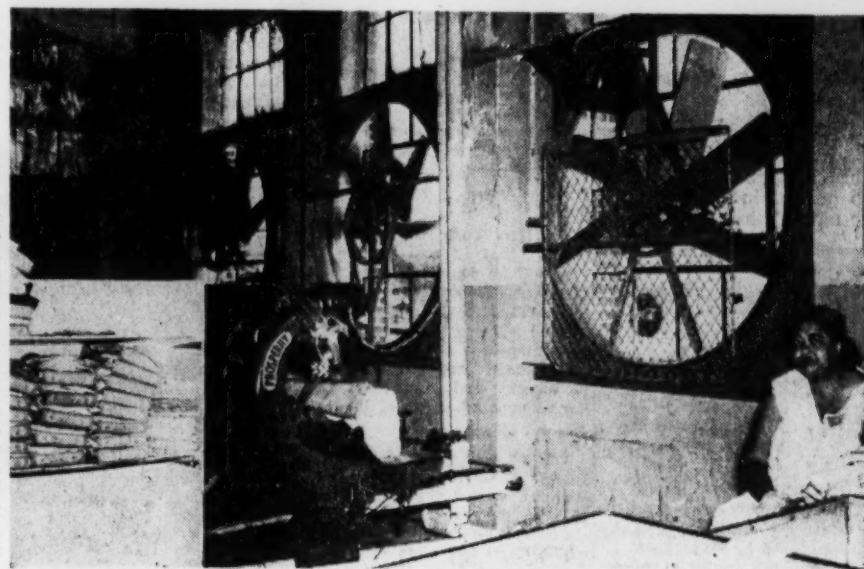

Coolair's method of cooling is known as "breeze conditioning." Developed by the American Coolair Corp. of Jacksonville, Fla., pioneer in the ventilating and cooling of homes and commercial buildings, the Coolair Attic Fan is a high quality piece of equipment, designed to move large volumes of air with maximum quietness... at lowest cost. This famous fan has been tested and approved in thousands of installations as one of the best and most economical ways of creating a gentle, free-air breeze right in your home or place of business.

The Coolair Attic installation is not "revolutionary," intricate or difficult. In fact, probably one of Coolair's greatest features is the inexpensive, simple installation—plus, long, trouble-free operation.

To get "breeze conditioning" with a Coolair fan, all you do is flick a wall switch. Almost instantly, every room in your house is flooded with a cooling flow of fresh air pulled in through doors and windows and up through the automatic ceiling shutter. At the same time, it whisks away the stagnant, fiery-hot attic air that has been conducting the sun's heat to the rooms below. Immediate result: cool, comfortable surroundings... though outdoors it may be muggy and sweltering!

Coolair fans are tremendously powerful. In large garages, stores, laundries, warehouses and manufacturing plants—wherever it's essential to "move" a lot of air—Coolair fans have done the job with remarkable effectiveness. In many Atlanta businesses, as well as in other cities and communities around the state, Coolair fans pay "dividends in comfort" every summer for both employees and customers.

For the name of your nearest Coolair dealer, call MAin 7878, or write the John L. Underwood Co., Inc., manufacturer's representative, located at 555 Whitehall St., SW, Atlanta. If you are building a new home or business property, consult your contractor or architect.

"COOLAIR" FANS COOL LARGE LAUNDRY PLANT—Above shows photo of partial laundry installation on Glen Iris Dr., NE (near Sears). Installed were five 62-inch, three-horsepower Coolair fans and two 50-inch, three-horsepower Coolair fans. Fans were installed to create more desirable working conditions, as well as to reduce unit cost of production. The seven Coolairs in the plant have the capacity of changing the air twice each minute. For full information about Coolair fans for business or residence, contact your dealer or contractor, or communicate direct with John L. Underwood Co., Inc., 555 Whitehall St., SW, Coolair manufacturer's representative.

Immigration Policies Of Dulles, Aides Hit

No Support for Liberal
Law, Corsi Declares

By ALVIN SHUSTER

WASHINGTON, April 17—Edward Corsi, the deposed State Department aide, charged today there was not a top official in the department who wanted to liberalize the nation's immigration laws.

The New York Republican asserted that Scott McLeod "thought he could have me as a piece of window dressing" so he could appeal to those who wanted a more liberal approach to immigration policies. McLeod is the State Department's security director and administrator of the refugee relief act of 1953.

ASKED SPEED UP

The act was designed to admit 209,000 refugees, escapees and orphans to the United States outside of the quotas of the McCarran-Walter immigration law, which Corsi has often criticized. Secretary of State Dulles three months ago asked Corsi to help speed up the refugee program.

Corsi was dismissed earlier this month, however, after he was attacked by Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Penn.). Sec. Dulles maintained Corsi was dismissed because he tried to circumvent the law.

Corsi renewed his charge today that this explanation of why he was dismissed is "phony." The only reason for the ouster, he asserted, was because of the Walter attacks.

"It is entirely the Walter attacks that led to my separation from the State Department," he said on the Columbia Broadcasting System's television program, "Face the Nation."

He acknowledged he interpreted the refugee law very liberally and that "some people may think that I interpreted in violation of the law itself." But, he added, all his liberal interpretations were made only after talks with Herman Phleger, legal adviser of the State Department.

NO SUPPORT

Asked if his ouster indicated an abandonment by the State Department of the effort to liberalize the McCarran-Walter act, Corsi replied:

"I don't think there is the slightest desire on the part of anybody in the state department to liberalize the McCarran-Walter act."

He expressed the belief, however, that President Eisenhower personally desired to eliminate the "discriminatory and un-American" provisions of the act which "have caused my trouble with Walter."

Corsi said he did not believe the White House knew Sec. Dulles was going to dismiss him. He said he talked to Maxwell M. Rabb, the President's assistant on minority problems, when his difficulties first began.

Expressway Leg To Open By May 15

By HERMAN HANCOCK

The final stretch of the $5,500,000 northeast leg of the Expressway will be opened by May 15.

That was the prediction Sunday of Sam Allison, urban engineer for the State Highway Department. Allison said hazy weather, the last leg, the 1.2-mile stretch from Piedmont road to Buford highway conceivably might be opened earlier in May. Construction cost estimates on the last leg of the three-mile-long stretch extending from Brookwood Station to Buford highway was placed at $1,728,949 by Col. Mose Cox, engineer for the joint Atlanta-Fulton County bond commission.

Cox said construction costs for the strip from Brookwood Station to Monroe drive was $1,380,983; from Monroe drive to Piedmont road, $1,206,505 and the final leg $1,728,949. In addition right-of-way costs for the entire length were placed at $1,270,000, making a total of $5,486,537.

Allison said the northeast leg is being lighted with the same type facilities as are now in service on the north expressway leg.

The stretch already would have been opened except for the fact that a connection is being constructed at Buford highway for the new four-lane highway to Gainesville.

The new road will leave the expressway east of the present Buford road thus relieving congestion on the existing inadequate roadway.

Mayor Hartsfield said city officials will confer as the time nears for opening of the new stretch with a view of staging an appropriate celebration.

State and federal governments supplied construction money for the development while Atlanta and Fulton County governments paid right-of-way costs.

The same cooperative arrangement has produced other expressway improvements and is expected to continue for construction of the giant, multi-million dollar east-west expressway. Preliminary cost estimates place total costs for that program at more than $22,000,000.

Ga. Postmasters Open 3-Day Meeting Here

Postmasters from throughout Georgia began registering Sunday night for a three-day postman's holiday in Atlanta.

2 Motorcyclists Killed in Georgia

Two persons were killed in separate motorcycle mishaps in Georgia Sunday, the State Patrol reported.

State patrolmen said Winston Dickerson of near Royston was killed four miles north of Danielsville on Georgia 181 as his motorcycle collided with an auto.

Clifton E. Brown, 3075 Antioch Rd., Macon, was killed five miles south of Talbotton on U.S. 80 when he lost control of his vehicle, patrolmen said.

Training in driving automobiles is provided in 10,000 American high schools, says the National Education Assn.

CHURCH GETS UNIQUE "BIRTHDAY PRESENT"

J. L. Respass, Rev. C. A. Norton and Air Conditioner

Church To Mark 30th Year With Air Conditioning Gift

By LAURA BARRE

Members of Peachtree Road Methodist Church are planning a birthday party for their church, complete with a be-ribboned gift.

The church, organized in April, 1925, will be 30 years old April 28. Members will "present" it a $30,000 air-conditioning unit as a "birthday present."

The birthday dinner party will be held at 6:30 p.m. April 27. All former pastors have been invited to attend and make brief talks.

Highlights of the second annual observance will be a sermon by Dr. N. C. McPherson at 11 a.m. Sunday, April 24.

HAD 19 MEMBERS

Dr. McPherson was pastor of the church from 1939 to 1942. He left to become president of Wesleyan College, Macon. He is now pastor of Fourth Avenue Methodist Church, Louisville, Ky.

The church was organized by the Rev. E. H. Wood with 19 members. The organizational service was held in the home of Dr. M. T. Salter.

From 1925 to 1942 members occupied a church building at the corner of Peachtree road and Sardis Way, NW, in Buckhead. In 1942 they moved into the first unit of their $880,000 plant at 3180 Peachtree Rd., NW. The plant was completed in 1949.

The church has had a total of 10 pastors. The Rev. Mr. Wood, a retired minister when he organized the church, served six months before he was succeeded by another retired minister, the Rev. C. A. Norton.

SERVED ONE YEAR

The Rev. Mr. Norton served about a year and was succeeded by the Rev. T. H. Shackelford, who served from 1926 to 1930. The Rev. R. J. Broyles was pastor from 1930 to 1932.

Dr. Nat G. Long served as pastor twice, from 1932 to 1933 and from 1942 to 1953. The Rev. T. Z. D. Eyerton served from 1933 to 1934 and the Rev. A. Lee Hale from 1934 and 1938. The Rev. W. Graham Davis was pastor from 1938 to 1939.

The present pastor, the Rev. Claud M. Haynes, succeeded Dr. Long in 1953.

Dams Save Rich Lands, Cut Damage by Floods

Constitution State News Service

ALPHARETTA, April 17—Flood control dams built by the Soil Conservation Service in north Fulton County are not only allowing farmers to reclaim rich bottom lands but are also preventing property losses from high water.

Just three years ago heavy spring rains not only flooded bottomlands in the Rocky Creek watershed but also flooded the Mountain Park resort area north of Roswell.

Farmers were unable to utilize bottomlands along the creek and the Mountain Park lake rose so sharply as to flood the city hall building, swimming pool, drive-ways and roads.

The strong flood waters poured down on the resort area from all over a 4,200-acre watershed.

To help farmers along the creek and also the residents of Mountain Park the Soil Conservation Service furnished the technical assistance and spearheaded the construction of two dams, above the Mountain Park lake.

The upper dam, thought to be the first such dam built east of the Mississippi River under the Small Watershed Flood Control Act passed by Congress, is known as the Wayne Coleman Lake.

This upper dam takes care of water from about 1,100 acres of the 4,200-acre watershed.

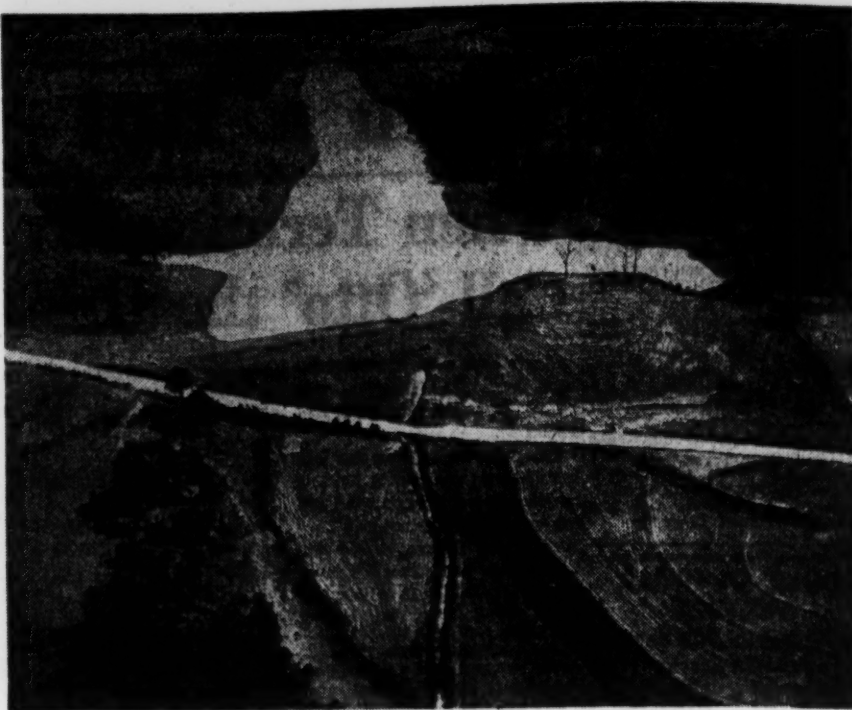

The second dam, about a mile and a quarter below the Coleman lake, is known as the Stanford lake and helps hold back the flood waters from about 2,500 acres of the 4,200-acre watershed.

The dams hold back flood waters during heavy rains and release these waters at such a rate that the creek bottoms will not flood.

As a result, nearly 300 acres of rich bottomland are now being reclaimed for agricultural production along Rocky Creek. In addition, residents of Mountain Park no longer have to worry about flood waters in their resort area.

A. M. White of Mountain Park says the big lake there now remains near normal even during the worst rains.

The SCS accomplishments on Rocky Creek are typical of work being done elsewhere in Georgia to reclaim land heretofore unfit for agricultural production.

Bank of Illa Depositors Paid Off by FDIC

The Bank of Illa, at Illa, Ga., was one of only two banks which failed in 1954 whose depositors had to be protected by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The other bank was the Bank of Whitesville, at Whitesville, Ky.

The FDIC, in a report issued Sunday at Washington, said the Illa bank was declared insolvent due to "a large amount of loans classified by examiners as substandard, doubtful and loss." The end of 1954 brought the FDIC through its 21st year.

Emory Panels To Hear New Zealand Ambassador

The New Zealand government attaches great importance to the integrity of Formosa and the Pescadores.

That statement came Sunday night from Sir Leslie Munro, New Zealand ambassador to the United States since 1951 and since January, 1954, New Zealand representative on the United Nations Security Council.

Asked to comment on the disclosure by President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles of a massive Red air buildup off Formosa, Sir Leslie said:

"The New Zealand government, as the government of the country which has taken the initiative in suggesting to the U.N. Security Council a cease fire in the area of the offshore islands, will naturally attach the greatest importance to the statement made by the President and the secretary of state."

"The New Zealand government will, of course, have to study that statement, and at this stage it would be impossible for me to make any further comment."

Sir Leslie arrived here by plane after addressing meetings in Tampa and Sarasota. He will address a panel of the Emory Institute of Citizenship on "The Far East" at 2 p.m. Monday and another panel on "The Communist World" at 3:30 p.m. Monday.

He will also address a luncheon at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday at Emory, and a dinner meeting of the Inquiry Club at the Piedmont Driving Club from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Dean Rusk, formerly of Atlanta, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, will speak at 8:30 p.m. Monday in the assembly room of the church school building on the Emory campus.

Dr. Charles D. Houshelt, assistant professor of political science at Emory, will moderate the "Communist World" panel, and Dr. Charles Lorch, associate professor of political science at Emory, the Far East panel.

Dr. Mose Harvey, head of the State Department's division of research of the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, and A. J. Evans, British consul in Atlanta, will also address the Monday panels.

...in this easy contest! Forty $235.00 Evinrude "Fleetwins" to be given to winners—ten each week in four weekly contests!

What a combination for outdoor fun

- a quiet, powerful Evinrude to take you places!
- ice-cold Coke to refresh you along the way!

Bolt a gleaming 1955 Evinrude to the stern... load your tackle, lunch and a cooler of ice-cold Coca-Cola... and take off for fun!

You could make that come true for you by being a winner in one of the four weekly contests, starting April 18. Ten Evinrude "Fleetwins" will be given each week for four weeks—you can enter each contest—four opportunities to win!

It's an easy contest! Just complete, in 25 words or less, this statement: "I take Coke on outings because..."

You'll think of many reasons — Coke brings you back refreshed... you like its bright, bracing taste... Coke is delicious with food... it's the drink most everyone prefers.

How to enter: Look for your dealer's contest display of Coca-Cola in cartons and get an official entry blank giving all rules. Write your statement and mail it—it's that easy! Entries in this week's contest must be postmarked before midnight, Sunday, April 24. Enter this week's contest and the three to follow.
